

Leadership Pizza - A Visual Exploration of Leadership Traits

Objective:

This engaging and creative activity aims to help participants visually explore and assess their understanding of essential leadership traits. It's a self-reflective exercise that encourages personal growth in leadership skills.

Materials Needed:

- Blank paper or printable pizza templates
- Colored markers or pencils
- A list of common leadership traits (for reference)

Instructions:

1. List Essential Leadership Traits:

- Begin by asking participants to individually list what they consider to be the key traits of effective leadership. Encourage them to think broadly, considering aspects like communication, empathy, decision-making, etc.

2. Create Your Leadership Pizza:

- Provide each participant with paper and drawing materials.
- Instruct them to draw a pizza, dividing it into slices that represent different leadership qualities. The size of each slice should reflect how important they perceive each trait to be. For instance, a larger slice could represent a trait they value highly

3. Visualization and Representation:

- Participants should label each 'slice' with a different leadership trait from their list.
- They can use a pie chart format or assign a percentage to each trait to indicate its importance.

4. Presentation and Self-Assessment:

- Once everyone has completed their pizzas, ask volunteers to present their Leadership Pizza to the group.
- During the presentation, prompt the participant to identify the leadership traits they feel are their weakest.

5. Setting Personal Development Goals:

- Challenge each participant to select at least one trait they would like to improve upon.
- Encourage them to set specific, achievable goals for developing this trait over a designated period.

6. Follow-Up Session:

- Plan a follow-up Leadership Pizza session (suggest a timeframe, such as six months later).
- During this session, participants can reflect on their progress and update their pizzas to represent any changes in their perception of essential leadership traits.

Closing the Activity:

- Conclude by emphasising the importance of continuous personal development in leadership.
- Encourage participants to keep their Leadership Pizza as a reminder of their commitment to grow as leaders.

Note to Participants:

Remember, the Leadership Pizza is a personal reflection tool. It's not about achieving a perfect balance but about recognizing areas for growth and celebrating strengths. Enjoy the process of self-discovery and development!
